

When a printer talks about bleed on a job - they simply mean the area just outside the finished trims on your page.

These trim marks indicate the cut on the edge of the job

So the area outside the dotted line is the bleed - it is needed to avoid white areas showing when the job is trimmed down to size.